SPIRITUAL REBIRTH

Promise to the Faithful: A Pillar in God's Temple

Patmos – In a prophetic message recorded by John in exile, Jesus Christ addressed the faithful church in Philadelphia with a striking promise of permanence and divine identity.

“The one who is victorious I will make a pillar in the temple of my God,” declared Christ. “Never again will they leave it.” This statement, directed to those who remain steadfast in faith, symbolises spiritual security and a lasting place in God’s presence.

Jesus continued, “I will write on them the name of my God and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which is coming down out of heaven from my God; and I will also write on them my new name.” This triple naming marks the believer with divine ownership, belonging, and destiny.

The reference to pillars—strong, unmovable, essential—suggests that those who overcome trials will have an unshakable role in God’s eternal kingdom. The “new Jerusalem” points to the future heavenly city promised to the faithful.

The message, part of the broader letters to the seven churches in Revelation, continues to inspire believers to endure with faith, knowing that their commitment is seen, and their reward is eternal.

UMP, Province Partner on Skills Drive

The Mpumalanga Provincial Government and the University of Mpumalanga (UMP) are set to collaborate on major projects.

Mbombela – The Mpumalanga Provincial Government and the University of Mpumalanga (UMP) are set to collaborate on major projects aimed at transforming the provincial economy and strengthening skills development.

UMP Vice-Chancellor Professor Thenjiwe Meyiwa, together with University Council Chairperson Sabelo Mahlalela, presented a number of flagship initiatives to Premier Mandla Ndlovu during a meeting held in Mbombela this week. Among the proposals were a large-scale hybrid rice production project and an Artificial Intelligence (AI) mastery training programme.

The rice project is designed to promote sustainable agriculture through innovation and applied research. According to Prof Meyiwa, the initiative will train 200 000 agricultural specialists, creating a new generation of experts equipped with modern farming techniques. She said the project is expected to generate 388 800 employment opportunities, positioning it as a job massification programme for the province.

Prof Meyiwa added that the rice project is projected to contribute R40.32 billion annually to Mpumalanga’s economy, making it one of the most ambitious agricultural investments proposed in the province.

Alongside agriculture, UMP has proposed an AI mastery training programme aimed at strengthening education and innovation. The programme will focus on teacher training, curriculum support, research and innovation, while equipping citizens with practical AI-related skills.

The Vice-Chancellor said the AI programme aligns with national plans to train 10 million South Africans in AI-applicable skills, adding that it is essential for developing an AI-literate society capable of driving economic transformation.

Premier Ndlovu welcomed the proposals and praised UMP for its bold vision. He directed the Provincial Government to begin developing a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) to formalise the partnership with the University.

The meeting was also attended by MEC for Education Lindi Masina, MEC for Agriculture, Rural Development, Land and Environmental Affairs Khethiwe Moeketsi, and Director-General Maggie Skosana, signalling strong provincial support for the initiatives.

If implemented, the collaboration is expected to play a significant role in boosting skills development, job creation and long-term economic growth in Mpumalanga.

CRIME
Operation Shanela II Nets Hundreds

Operation Shanela II has delivered significant law-enforcement gains across Mpumalanga, with hundreds of arrests and major confiscations recorded between 29 January and 1 February 2026.

The multi-agency operation, coordinated by the South African Police Service (SAPS), brought together Traffic Police, law-enforcement agencies, the South African National Defence Force, the Department of Cooperative Governance and Traditional Affairs, private security and Community Policing Forums.

During the operation, officers searched 399 premises, stopped and searched more than 3,000 people and over 1,200 vehicles, and conducted extensive patrols, roadblocks and checkpoints across the province. Detectives also traced 11 wanted suspects, while specialised teams carried out tracking operations and hostel searches.

Compliance inspections formed a key part of the operation. Police closed one unlicensed liquor outlet and inspected more than 220 licensed outlets. Inspections were also carried out at second-hand dealers, scrap yards, firearm-holding institutions, farms, mines and both formal and informal businesses to ensure compliance with labour and safety laws.

Arrests were made for a wide range of serious offences, including murder, attempted murder, rape, armed robbery, carjacking, assault and burglary. Police also arrested suspects for drug-related crimes, illegal possession of firearms and ammunition, dealing in illicit liquor, driving under the influence, and immigration offences. In total, more than 100 undocumented immigrants were detained.

Large quantities of drugs were seized, including over two tonnes of dagga, along with crack cocaine, crystal meth, nyaope and mandrax. Police also confiscated firearms, ammunition, dangerous weapons, fireworks, illegal cigarettes, contraband goods, copper cables and several vehicles.

Acting Provincial Commissioner of SAPS in Mpumalanga, Major General (Dr) Zeph Mkhwanazi, praised the operation’s outcomes, saying the results demonstrated the impact of integrated, intelligence-driven policing.

“These outcomes send a strong message that crime will not be tolerated. We remain resolute in our mandate to protect the people of Mpumalanga and uphold the rule of law,” he said.

Police have indicated that similar high-impact operations will continue as part of ongoing efforts to improve safety and restore order in communities across the province.

Graskop Gorge Lift Company has stepped forward with a R100 000 donation to the SANParks Honorary Rangers Flood Disaster Relief Fund.

Graskop Gorge Lift Company Supports Kruger Flood Relief

As Kruger National Park marks 100 years as one of South Africa's most treasured conservation areas, it is facing one of the most difficult periods in its history following devastating floods that have caused extensive damage to infrastructure across the park.

Recent flooding has destroyed roads, bridges and visitor facilities, leaving several camps inaccessible and placing immense strain on the park's operations. The cost of repairs is estimated at more than R500 million, placing significant pressure on the already stretched resources of South African National Parks (SANParks).

In response, the Graskop Gorge Lift Company has stepped forward with a R100 000 donation to the SANParks Honorary Rangers Flood Disaster Relief Fund, demonstrating solidarity with the country's flagship conservation area and the communities that depend on it.

Kruger National Park plays a vital role not only in biodiversity conservation, but also in sustaining tourism-driven livelihoods across Mpumalanga and Limpopo. The floods have disrupted tourism activity, threatening jobs and income streams for thousands of people linked to the park's economy.

The Graskop Gorge Lift Company has called on other tourism operators, businesses and concerned citizens to follow their example and contribute towards the recovery effort.

"Every contribution counts," the company said, emphasising that donations will assist in restoring access to the park, protecting wildlife habitats and safeguarding the livelihoods of communities dependent on tourism.

Co-founder Oupa Pilane said the donation was motivated by a sense of shared responsibility.

"We hope our contribution inspires other tourism entities, businesses and concerned citizens to step up," said Pilane. "The park belongs to all South Africans, and it is our collective responsibility to protect this national treasure, especially during its milestone centenary year."

SANParks has acknowledged that restoring Kruger's infrastructure will take time and sustained support, but contributions from the private sector and the public can significantly accelerate recovery efforts.

Members of the public who wish to support the rebuilding of Kruger National Park can make donations directly to the SANParks Honorary Rangers Flood Disaster Relief Fund. Contributions of any size will help ensure that the park continues to thrive for future generations.

As South Africa's most iconic wildlife destination, Kruger National Park remains a symbol of national pride. Initiatives such as this donation highlight the importance of collective action in preserving the country's natural heritage in times of crisis.

New Mapulaneng Hospital Still Not Ready

Mapulaneng Hospital.

Residents of Bushbuckridge may have to wait a little longer before the new Mapulaneng Hospital opens its doors. Parliament’s Portfolio Committee on Health has raised concerns about delays, with the hospital originally expected to be finished last June.

Committee Chairperson Faith Muthambi, who visited the old hospital, expressed frustration: “They’ve promised the new hospital will be completed by July, but we will have to wait and see. Here, nothing seems to be working properly.” The current hospital, dating back to 1936, is long overdue for replacement, yet no upgrades have been planned while the new facility is under construction.

The site visit was part of a four-day oversight programme by the Portfolio Committee on Public Works and Infrastructure. MEC Thulasizwe Thomo and HOD Charles Morolo led a departmental team to check the progress of the multi-phase, 365-bed hospital project.

Once finished, the new hospital will include modern clinical and non-clinical facilities, as well as extensive external works.

While the new hospital promises to bring much-needed improvements to health services in the area, locals remain wary that the latest July completion date might also be pushed back.

Families Must Not Shield GBV Perpetrators

Mpumalanga MEC for Community Safety, Security and Liaison, Jackie Macie, has called on the police to urgently investigate alleged interference by family members of a suspect linked to rape.

The case involves two victims from the same family. The first, now 24, was allegedly assaulted between 2008 and 2010, while her four-year-old daughter was allegedly assaulted in November 2025. The suspect, who is both the father of the first victim and grandfather of the child, was arrested in December 2025 and later released on bail with strict conditions preventing contact with the victims.

MEC Macie warned that any attempts by family or community members to shield perpetrators will not be tolerated. “Members of the community and families must support victims and encourage them to speak out on such cases. In that way, we will win the fight against the scourge and remove all perpetrators from our communities,” he said.

The MEC also urged the South African Police Service to gather sufficient evidence to ensure the case is successfully concluded. In a separate incident, Macie expressed shock at the murder of a two-year-old in KwaMhlanga, allegedly by her uncle, who has since handed himself over to police.

Calling for the support of churches and the Moral Regeneration Movement, MEC Macie said communities need prayer and guidance, while counselling services from the Department of Social Development should be made available to affected families to help them heal.

R4m Boost for Youth Tourism Businesses

The Mpumalanga Department of Economic Development and Tourism, in partnership with the National Youth Development Agency (NYDA), has disbursed R4 million in funding to support youth-owned tourism businesses across the province.

The funding, awarded through the Mpumalanga Tourism Youth Fund (MTYF), will benefit 31 tourism enterprises owned by young entrepreneurs. The initiative forms part of government’s broader commitment to stimulate youth entrepreneurship and strengthen the tourism sector as a key driver of economic growth.

Speaking at the announcement in Mbombela on Sunday, MEC for Economic Development and Tourism, Jesta Sidell, said the fund places young people at the centre of economic reconstruction. She highlighted tourism as a catalytic sector capable of addressing unemployment, poverty and inequality in Mpumalanga.

The MTYF provides asset-based finance, working capital, property acquisition support, as well as assistance with intangible assets and intellectual property development. The fund is supported by a three-year partnership agreement between the department and the NYDA, running from 2025 to 2027.

NYDA Executive Chairperson, Dr Sunshine Myende, praised Mpumalanga for establishing a dedicated provincial youth tourism fund, describing it as a practical model for advancing youth economic participation. He expressed hope that other provinces would replicate the initiative.

Beyond funding, the programme includes post-investment support delivered in collaboration with SEDA, Standard Bank and other stakeholders.

This support will focus on financial literacy, compliance training, mentorship and business advisory services to ensure sustainability and job creation.

The initiative aims to transition young entrepreneurs into the mainstream economy while strengthening Mpumalanga’s tourism sector and reducing youth unemployment.

Tourism Sites Reopen After Recent Floods

Water levels at Mac Mac Pools along the popular Panorama Route in Sabie have stabilised following the recent floods, restoring calm to one of Mpumalanga’s most loved natural attractions. Known for its scenic beauty and tranquil atmosphere, Mac Mac Pools continues to offer visitors a refreshing escape into nature.

The natural pools, set amid lush surroundings, provide an ideal spot for relaxation and leisure. Visitors pay a modest entrance fee, which grants access to both pool areas as well as designated braai facilities, making it a convenient destination for day trips with friends and family. A visit requires little more than a picnic basket, good company and an appreciation for the outdoors.

While conditions have improved, visitors are still urged to exercise caution. Water levels and currents can vary between the pools, and some areas may present potential hazards. Care should be taken, particularly after periods of heavy rainfall, to ensure a safe and enjoyable experience for everyone.

The journey to Mac Mac Pools is part of the attraction itself. The drive along the Panorama Route offers breathtaking views, winding roads and iconic landscapes that showcase Mpumalanga at its finest. This makes the destination not only a place to unwind, but also a memorable travel experience.

Similarly, conditions at Bourke’s Luck Potholes, another major attraction in the province, have returned to normal following floods experienced a few weeks ago. Authorities and tourism stakeholders have confirmed that Mpumalanga is open for business, with key sites once again ready to welcome visitors.

As water levels settle and nature recovers, residents and tourists alike are encouraged to reconnect with the outdoors. Mpumalanga stands ready to host visitors seeking relaxation, adventure and the unmatched beauty of its natural heritage.

Flood Repairs Open Key Kruger Routes

Visitors to Kruger National Park are beginning to see improved access after the severe January 2026 floods, which damaged roads, bridges, tourism facilities and staff accommodation across the park.

In an update issued on Monday, 2 February 2026, SANParks confirmed that restoration work is continuing, with visitor safety remaining the top priority.

The park’s H7 Route between Orpen Gate and Satara Rest Camp has now reopened to traffic. However, motorists have been cautioned to proceed with extreme care near the Nsemani Dam area, where flood damage has left only a single lane accessible. Heavy vehicles exceeding eight tonnes are not permitted through the affected section.

To maintain movement while repairs and reconstruction continue, the parks authority said it is building a bypass using the S12 and S40 routes. This alternative route is expected to support accessibility during ongoing work at the dam area.

Several visitor sites have also reopened as of Monday. These include Tsendze Rustic Camp near Mopani Rest Camp, the Masorini Ruins near Phalaborwa Gate, as well as the Mooiplaas Picnic Site and Babalala Picnic Site picnic sites.

SANParks reminded visitors that gravel roads marked “No Entry” must not be used under any circumstances. Access at Orpen Gate has also been opened to Open Safari Vehicles, though a quota system will apply to manage traffic volumes and keep visitors safe.

Young South African Scientists Shine on Global Stage

New Delhi / South Africa – Four talented young scientists from South Africa are celebrating outstanding international success after returning home with gold and silver medals from the Initiative for Research and Innovation in STEM (IRIS) Global Symposium, held recently in New Delhi, India.

The prestigious symposium brought together some of the brightest young minds from across the world, showcasing innovative research aimed at addressing global challenges, particularly in environmental sustainability, technology and social inclusion.

Leading the South African delegation was Nkanteko Moyane (15) from Daleview Secondary School in Gauteng, who was awarded a gold medal for his research project titled ECOHARVEST: Integrated Phytoremediation for Contaminated Soil and Mining Wastewater. His project focuses on using plants to restore polluted soil and treat mining wastewater, offering an environmentally friendly solution to a growing problem.

“Winning an award at the IRIS Global Symposium felt great because it shows that my hard work and dedication have been recognised on such a big international platform,” said Moyane. “I am proud to represent my country and grateful to everyone who supported me along the way, especially Eskom Expo for Young Scientists.”

Another standout performer was Jivesh Ramnath (18) from Hoërskool Richardsbaai in Richards Bay, KwaZulu-Natal, who received a silver medal in the computer science category. His project, JØ7 Vireo: Development of a Low-Cost AI-Powered Navigation Device for the Blind and Visually Impaired, uses artificial intelligence to assist users through real-time object identification and distance awareness.

“Winning a silver medal at the IRIS Global Symposium felt exhilarating,” said Ramnath, adding that the recognition reinforced his commitment to developing technology that improves people’s lives.

Also representing South Africa were Melokuhle Khuzwayo and Simesihle Khuzwayo (both 17) from King Bhekuzulu High School in Nongoma, KwaZulu-Natal. The pair received Participation Awards for their project, Double Trouble, Double Solution: Neutralising Acids and Plastics with Nature’s Help, which explores natural solutions to environmental pollution caused by acid waste and plastic materials.

Eskom Expo for Young Scientists Executive Director Parthy Chetty praised the learners’ achievements, describing them as a powerful demonstration of South Africa’s scientific potential.

“The significance of these awards highlights our country’s scientific talent and innovation,” said Chetty. “Two of our learners won grand awards, which shows that South African youth can compete at the highest international level. Their projects address real-world challenges and reflect innovation that matters.”

Chetty added that the success of the young scientists strengthens South Africa’s global reputation and underscores the importance of continued investment in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM).

He further emphasised the role of collaboration between key stakeholders in nurturing young talent. “There are three key stakeholders – government, educational institutions and the private sector – who play a critical and integrated role in supporting young scientists,” he said. “From a government perspective, there is a need for strong policy support, expanded funding for STEM initiatives and greater investment in science fairs and Olympiads.”

The achievements of these young scientists serve as an inspiration to learners across the country, proving that with dedication, mentorship and opportunity, South African youth can make meaningful contributions to solving global challenges.

Families of Lily Mine Victims Renew Call for Justice

Nelspruit, Mpumalanga – Ten years after the tragic collapse of the Lily Mine, the families of the three miners who lost their lives are once again seeking justice. On 4 February 2026, the families lodged a formal complaint with the South African Human Rights Commission (SAHRC), accusing the National Prosecuting Authority (NPA) and the Department of Mineral Resources and Energy of failing to take proper action following the findings of the Nelspruit Magistrate’s Court inquiry.

The families, who were accompanied by ActionSA members led by party president Herman Mashaba, highlighted the ongoing anguish caused by the lack of accountability and the fact that the remains of Pretty Nkambule, Yvonne Mnisi, and Solomon Nyirenda have not been retrieved a decade after the incident.

Reading the complaint outside the SAHRC offices, family spokesperson Harry Mazibuko said: “A formal inquiry conducted in 2017 confirmed that the tragedy was both forcible and preventable, arising from negligence and systemic failure in mine safety. Importantly, the inquiry found that there was a reasonable basis upon which criminal accountability could be considered against the relevant parties and recommended that the NPA consider prosecution. We have seen no decisive action that will advance accountability or justice.”

The complaint, lodged on behalf of the families, states: “We hereby lodge this complaint with the South African Human Rights Commission. This complaint is directed towards the NPA and the Department of Mineral Resources for infringement of our constitutional rights, human dignity and just administrative action.”

The Lily Mine tragedy occurred on 5 February 2016, when the collapse of a crown pillar trapped three miners underground. An inquest into the incident revealed that the mine owners and management failed to conduct a proper risk assessment, while both the police and the Department of Mineral and Petroleum Resources were criticised for failing to curb illegal mining activities, which contributed to the disaster.

On 5 February 2026, ActionSA stood with the families to mark the tenth anniversary of the tragedy and to renew the call for justice.

Herman Mashaba, who has consistently led calls for accountability over the years, reiterated the importance of keeping the case in public consciousness.

“Three black people just vanished, and if we think it only happened to those families, it could happen to your family tomorrow. Our approach is that Lily Mine must remain top of mind,” said Mashaba.

For the families of Nkambule, Nyirenda, and Mnisi, the tenth anniversary serves as a painful reminder of justice delayed. Despite the passing years, their determination remains unwavering. “We will continue to fight for accountability, to honour the memory of our loved ones, and to ensure that mine safety and justice are not ignored,” Mazibuko added.

The SAHRC is now expected to investigate the formal complaint and determine whether the NPA and Department of Mineral Resources have indeed failed in their duties to uphold the law, protect human rights, and pursue justice for the victims of the Lily Mine tragedy.

Ten years on, the families’ message remains clear: justice must be served.

Songeni Rangers Dominate Derby Clash

Songeni Rangers FC delivered a commanding performance on derby day, defeating Bombani United 3-0 in a Thulamahashe Football Association fixture played on Friday, 31 January 2026.

The match, hosted at Rangers Sports Field in Swidulwini, kicked off at 15:15 and drew strong local support, with fans treated to an entertaining and one-sided contest.

Bombani United struggling to recover. Music added the third goal, sealing a convincing victory for the home side.

Songeni Rangers controlled the tempo for most of the match, showing discipline, sharp passing and solid defence to keep Bombani United scoreless.

The result boosts Rangers' confidence as they continue their campaign, while Bombani United will be looking to regroup ahead of their next fixture.
